NIKKI M. MASCALI, REPORTER

While many states are in the midst of a very active flu season, another form of influenza is also making the rounds, and it's targeting your four-legged friends. That's right, dog flu is a real thing, and vets in at least 46 states have treated infected pups. Find out what symptoms to look out for, how it's spread and ways to treat this highly contagious (to dogs, not humans) illness on page 4. For more health coverage, visit metro.us.

EAGLES FAN ALLEGEDLY PUNCHED POLICE HORSE

An intoxicated fan allegedly disgraced the Eagles' playoff win on Saturday by punching a Philly police horse. A Lehigh County man caught sneaking in to see the Eagles without a ticket responded by punching a police horse that was patrolling the stadium, police said. Taylor Hendricks, 22, of Whitehall, is facing charges of aggravated assault, assault on a law enforcement office and cruelty to animals, the PPD said. "Security personnel at Lincoln Financial Field ejected the defendant because he was intoxicated and did not possess a ticket," a police report stated. There was no clear motivation for why Hendricks allegedly attacked the horse who was with the Mounted Unit; according to the police report, he walked up and started throwing blows.

JUSTICE DEPT TO APPEAL 'DREAMER' COURT RULING

The Justice Department on Tuesday said it will ask the Supreme Court to overturn a judge's ruling last week that blocked President Donald Trump's move to end a program that protects hundreds of thousands of immigrants brought to the U.S. illegally as children. The Trump administration will file an appeal of the judge's injunction directly with the conservative-majority Supreme Court as well as seek to appeal to the San Francisco-based 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, the department said. The Republican president in September rescinded the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA), a program put in place in 2012 by his Democratic predecessor Barack Obama, effective in March. A variety of state attorneys general, organizations and individuals challenged Trump's action in federal courts. Read more about DACA on page 6.

COLOMBIA BRIDGE COLLAPSE

A bridge collapsed in the Guayabetal municipality on the road that connects Bogota, Colombia, with the city of Villavicencio on Monday. When the structure suddenly collapsed, there were about 35 or 40 workers at the site. Ten workers were killed and eight injured, according to authorities.

DOCTOR SAYS TRUMP IN 'EXCELLENT' HEALTH

President Donald Trump had a normal score on a cognitive exam and is in excellent health, although he could benefit from a lower-fat diet and more exercise, the White House physician said on Tuesday. "In summary, the president's overall health is excellent," Dr. Ronny Jackson told reporters. "He continues to enjoy the significant long-term cardiac and overall health benefits that come from a lifetime of abstinence from tobacco and alcohol." The examination took place on Friday toward the end of a week in which Trump's mental fitness for the job had come under intense scrutiny after a controversial book, "Fire and Fury: Inside the Trump White House," portrayed him as childlike and mercurial. Jackson said Trump had performed well on a cognitive assessment, which the president had requested.

CALIFORNIA SIBLINGS TREATED AFTER ORDEAL

The 13 California siblings kept in "horrific" conditions by their parents, including some who were shackled to furniture, others who were starved, were being treated after an ordeal that could leave them scarred for years, authorities said on Tuesday. Police were investigating the circumstances under which the parents, David Allen Turpin, 57, and Louise Anna Turpin, 49, had subjected their children to the abuse, Capt. Greg Fellows of the Riverside County Sheriff's Department said. The couple was arrested on Sunday and each charged with nine counts of torture and 10 counts of child endangerment, the sheriff's office said. They were each held on $9 million bail, with a court hearing scheduled for Thursday. Some of the children were being fed and in stable condition at a local hospital, officials said.

NJ attorney convicted of endangering stepdaughter with sexual misconduct

sam.newhouse@metro.us

He had previously been found not guilty on similar charges.

An Atlantic City attorney previously acquitted of sexually assaulting a former teenage stepdaughter has been convicted of child endangerment by sexual misconduct related to her younger sister.

Criminal defense attorney Jose David Alcantara, 57, of Ventor Avenue, was convicted this week of the misconduct, which started when the victim was 10 years old.

"The state presented evidence showing that Alcantara would repeatedly engage in acts that included touching the child's buttocks and repeatedly walking in on her in the shower," Atlantic County prosecutors said in a press release. The conduct allegedly started in 2005 and ended sometime in 2012 when the victim was around age 17.

"The extent of the defendant's sexual conduct directed at this young girl throughout this timeframe was extremely disturbing," Chief Assistant Prosecutor John Flammer said in a statement. "The victim, who is now 22, is grateful for this verdict. We appreciate that these jurors were able to understand what this defendant did to this child."

It's the second time Alcantara has faced charges of sexual crimes against a child, but in the previous case, he was acquitted. That case allegedly involved the older sister of the victim whom he was convicted of endangering, both of whom were his stepdaughters at the time, according to a 2016 post-acquittal interview he gave the Press of Atlantic City.

Alcantara said his ex-wife, whom he met while traveling in Russia in 2004, moved alone with her two daughters to the United States. In 2016, he was found not guilty by a jury of charges of aggravated sexual assault against his other stepdaughter.

He was first charged and arrested in 2012 with abusing the older sister from 2006 to 2010, starting when she was 14. He claimed to be innocent, and said he refused multiple plea deals with no jail time to prove his innocence and predicted he'd win the case against him relating to the younger sister.

Alcantara was previously found guilty of unethical conduct by New Jersey's Supreme Court in 1995, for allegedly urging his client's co-defendants in the 1992 theft of a church bell not to testify, but he was not punished beyond a fine due to it being his first offense.

Alcantara is now detained and awaiting sentencing on Feb. 22.

Wells Fargo loses bid to end Philadelphia predatory lending lawsuit

A federal judge in Philadelphia on Tuesday rejected Wells Fargo & Co's bid to dismiss that city's lawsuit accusing the largest U.S. mortgage lender of predatory lending targeting black and Hispanic borrowers.

District Judge Anita Brody said Philadelphia may pursue claims that the bank's alleged "reverse redlining" violated the federal Fair Housing Act, though she had "serious concerns" about whether claims of economic harm could survive.

Wells Fargo spokesman Tom Goyda said in an email that the decision, "while disappointing, in no way suggests that the claims ultimately will prevail."

The lawsuit is one of several against big lenders by major cities in the country claiming that mortgage lending discrimination causes more defaults by minority borrowers, lower property tax revenue and higher costs to combat crime and blight. REUTERS

There is a two-dose vaccine that will treat both strains of dog flu, but "immunity is not at its peak until two-plus weeks after the second booster," said Dr. Robin Brennen. ISTOCK

Pet owners warned of uptick in dog flu cases

nikki.mascali@metro.us

Here's what you need to know to protect your pup.

As many states are experiencing a very active flu season right now, another form of influenza is also making its way across the country, but this one is targeting your four-legged friends.

Like human flu, dog flu is highly contagious — and can be deadly in some cases. As of last week, veterinarians in at least 46 states, including Pennsylvania, Colorado, Florida and California, have treated dogs that were infected with the virus, Fox News initially reported.

"Canine influenza is very similar to the human form in that it is self-limiting and not life-threatening," said Dr. Robin Brennen, senior medical director at Animal Care Centers of New York City. "Influenza can be fatal, but mortality is less than 5 percent."

Dog flu symptoms to watch out for

The symptoms of dog flu are often akin to those related to "kennel cough": coughing, sneezing, fever, nasal and eye discharge, a decrease in appetite and general mood changes, but some of the milder symptoms can turn into pneumonia, Brennen said.

"Prolonged coughing fits, difficulty breathing, lethargy and inappetence should be more causes for concern," she added. "Suspicions should be raised if a large population of dogs gets sick at the same time, as influenza has about an 80 percent infection rate. This is because it is a relatively new disease, and natural immunity has not occurred."

There are two strains of dog flu, H2N8 and H3N2. The former was first found in racing greyhounds in Florida in 2004, and the strain is believed to have come from a horse flu strain, according to the American Veterinary Medical Foundation. The latter strain was first identified in the U.S. in 2015 after respiratory illness was detected in Chicago.

"Canine influenza is transmitted through droplets or aerosols containing respiratory secretions from coughing, barking and sneezing," the AVMA said.

It can be spread via kennels, shelters, dog parks, doggie daycares, dog shows, food and water bowls and collars and leashes. While it cannot be transmitted to humans, dog flu can be transmitted from them — and remain viable, or live and infectious, on surfaces for up to 48 hours, on clothes for 24 hours and on hands for 12 hours.

If your dog is showing any of the above symptoms of canine influenza or is just not acting like their usual self, seek veterinary care.

My dog has canine influenza. Now what?

According to the AVMA, infected dogs should be isolated for at least four weeks, preferably in "an area with a separate air supply," and treatment should be designated by your vet. The dog flu virus seems to be easily killed by common disinfectants found in homes and most pet facilities, the organization added.

Anyone who comes in contact with a dog infected with canine influenza should frequently wash her hands, especially before and after handling or cleaning, and if able, protective attire should be worn to prevent the virus from spreading to clothes.

HOW TO TREAT DOG FLU

Just like with people, dog flu treatment is often supportive, Brennen said, and "you want to treat the symptoms the dog has and maintain hydration and nutrition."

There is a two-dose vaccine that will treat both H3N8 and H3N2 strains, but "immunity is not at its peak until two-plus weeks after the second booster," Brennen said.

While it can reduce your pup's risk of contracting dog flu and reduce its severity and duration, vaccination may not prevent infection altogether, she warned.

As in their human counterparts, dogs who get the flu vaccination may experience pain at the injection site, facial swelling, mild fever or an allergic reaction.

What do Americans really fear the most?

NIKKI M. MASCALI
nikki.mascali@metro.us

The anxieties range from the federal government to air pollution.

There are many things to be frightened of in the world, especially in the wake of this past weekend's false alarm of an inbound ballistic missile threat in Hawaii, but did you ever wonder what Americans are really scared of?

If you're thinking the answer might include recent headline-making topics like nuclear war, sexual harassment or inequality, you're wrong — and you may be surprised by the results of a new study that breaks down American's fears by state from Your Local Security.

"We want to be a resource and provide information that will make people think about their safety and security," Scott Bay, editor/content strategist for Your Local Security, told Metro. "We want the world to be a safer place and for issues related to security to be a big part of our conversations as a nation."

To gather its data, Your Local Security looked at the top searched public, workplace, school, home and driving safety concerns, and then used Google search trend data to organize and rank by state.

The fears range from the federal government (ironically, the top concern in Washington, D.C.) and natural disasters (Idaho) to air pollution (Oregon) and illegal immigration (Arizona, Connecticut and Rhode Island).

Not surprisingly, given that there were two within the span of 41 days in the back half of 2017, the top concern in New York is terrorist attacks.

In Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, the biggest fear is whether or not the New England Patriots and Philadelphia Eagles will face each other in Super LII. Just kidding! The top fears in those states are car accidents and unemployment, respectively.

"The most surprising fear that made the list to me was forklifts, and what was even more surprising is how many states had a high search result for that safety concern," Bay said of the fear that was No. 1 in Nebraska.

Gun violence made an appearance in just one state, Illinois, whose biggest city, Chicago, had 2,785 shooting incidents last year, CNN reported — and 89 shooting victims already this year, according to the Chicago Tribune's tracker.

Metro couldn't help but ask what's been keeping Bay up at night.

"For me, the most concerning issue right now is natural disasters and climate change," he said.

What do Metro readers fear the most?

According to Your Local Security's study, here are the top three fears of residents of Pennsylvania:

1. Unemployment
2. Income
3. Choking

Using data from the top searched public, workplace, school, home and driving safety concerns, Your Local Security lists America's biggest fears by state. YOUR LOCAL SECURITY

POLITICS

Government shutdown looms amid harsh immigration exchange

Partisan finger-pointing over immigration policy Tuesday left Congress and the White House stumbling closer to a possible federal government shutdown by the end of the week, although Wall Street held out hopes for a deal to prevent that.

Passage of another temporary funding bill by the Republican-led Congress before Friday's deadline seemed the likeliest outcome, said policy analysts, while acknowledging that the negotiating climate among Republicans and Democrats has become increasingly poisonous. Government funding for the current fiscal year runs out at midnight Friday.

The slim Republican margin of control in the Senate means Trump's party will need some Democratic support to resolve the government funding stand-off. Democrats have said they want a shutdown-preventing spending bill that protects the Dreamer immigrants, mostly Hispanic young adults. REUTERS

Homeland Security secretary says deporting Dreamers not a priority

DHS emphasized that Dreamers will only face deportation if they commit crimes.

LENYON WHITAKER
lenyon.whitaker@metro.us

The Department of Homeland Security Secretary Kirstjen Nielsen says the deportation of undocumented immigrants will not be a priority if the Trump administration fails to reach a deal to protect immigrants who receive benefits from the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program.

"It's not going to be a priority of the Immigration and Customs Enforcement to prioritize their removal," Nielsen told "CBS This Morning" on Tuesday. "I've said that before. That's not the policy of DHS," she added.

Nielsen explained that immigrants who follow the law and are properly registered to the DACA program should not be worried about having their benefits end or fear deportation.

"If you are a DACA that's compliant with your registration, meaning you haven't committed a crime, you, in fact, are registered, you're not priority of enforcement for ICE should the program end," Nielsen said.

When asked if Dreamers' status would remain a low priority for ICE, Nielsen confirmed that it would as long as they didn't commit a crime.

Nielsen hopes that members of Congress can reach a deal and find a way for legislation to keep the program active.

During the interview Ms. Nielsen was also asked about the vulgar comments President Trump reportedly made about Haiti and parts of Africa, referring to them as "s–thole" countries. Nielsen responded, "That's not a word that I remember being used. There were a lot of conversations happening at the same time. It's not a particular phrase that I heard," she added.

Nielsen later testified during a hearing held by the Senate Judiciary Committee on Capitol Hill on Tuesday in which she once again stated that she did not hear the president use the derogatory phrase when referring to Haiti and African nations.

The DACA program has granted protections for about 800,000 young undocumented immigrants. The program was implemented by the Obama administration in 2012.

President Trump has emphasized that in order to maintain the DACA deal and to protect hundreds of thousands of young, undocumented immigrants, there still needs to be a border wall.

"It's got to include the wall. Any solution has to include the wall because without the wall it doesn't work," the president said at a joint White House news conference with Norwegian Prime Minister Erna Solberg last week.

Dems say they need 1 more Senate vote to overrule net neutrality repeal

SAM BRODSKY
Samantha.Brodsky@metro.us

A new political fight is just beginning.

Since the FCC, led by Chairman Ajit Pai, voted to repeal Obama-era laws protecting net neutrality on Dec. 14, the Senate had 60 legislative days under the Congressional Review Act (CRA) to challenge the decision, The Washington Post reports.

Just last Tuesday, they had 40 senators sign off on the resolution to reverse the repeal. Now, they've totalled at 50 votes — all 49 Democratic-aligned senators and one Republican, Susan Collins of Maine, have signed off — and need to get to a majority ruling of 51 to pass.

"[Collins] believes that a careful, deliberative process involving experts and the public is warranted to ensure that consumers have strong protections that guarantee consumer choice, free markets, and continued growth," a spokesperson for the senator told the Bangor Daily News.

As it stands, they are one Republican vote short. As Senate minority leader Chuck Schumer (D-N.Y.) tweeted Tuesday morning: "Democrats are united; we will force a vote to save net neutrality, but we need a majority to do it. RT to tell Republicans to vote YES on the net neutrality CRA."

Sen. Ed Markey (D-Mass.), who proposed the resolution, also took to Twitter Tuesday morning, writing, "Senate Dems are standing with the millions of Americans who have raised their voices in favor of Net Neutrality. The Internet should belong to YOU, not the GOP's corporate cronies."

However, even if they did get a majority vote — just one more person to sign off — the bill would next have to go through the Republican-led House and would need to be signed by Trump, who has been very vocal about his support of the Dec. 14 ruling.

Markey predicted, according to Variety, that if the resolution made its way to the House, the vote could be as far away as "late spring or summer" even.

So, it's safe to say that for Democrats, the fight is far from over, and it'll be a hard battle to win.

If they don't succeed, the effects of the net neutrality repeal won't take root right away, but they'll gradually make themselves known.

As Glenn O'Donnell, an industry analyst at the research firm Forrester, wrote in a statement to The Washington Post: "You and I and everyone else who uses the Internet for personal use will see some changes in pricing models. For most of us, I expect we will pay more. Service bundles (e.g., social media package, streaming video package) will likely be bolted on to basic transport for things like web surfing and email."

"Make no mistake about it, net neutrality will be a major issue in the 2018 campaigns, and we are going to let everybody know where we stand and they stand," Schumer said at a press conference last week, adding, "We are going to be fighting to save a free and open internet, while Republicans are fighting to hand it over to corporations."

Sens. Bill Nelson (D-FL) (L), Ed Markey (D-MA) and Tammy Duckworth (D-IL) speak about the Congressional Review Act (CRA) resolution on Jan. 9, 2018.

Baby Kardashian-West is here!

the word

Hooray! ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Blessed be: The third Kardashian-West baby has finally blessed us with her presence.

Kim Kardashian and Kanye West's surrogate gave birth to a baby girl, whose name we don't yet know, on January 15 at 12:47 am.

Kardashian announced the news on her website, writing, "Kanye and I are happy to announce the arrival of our healthy, beautiful baby girl. We are incredibly grateful to our surrogate who made our dreams come true with the greatest gift one could give and to our wonderful doctors and nurses for their special care."

The baby girl joins older siblings North, 4, and Saint, 2, who are apparently very, very excited about it. "North and Saint are especially thrilled to welcome their baby sister," she wrote.

Congratulations to the Kardashian-Wests on the new addition to their family. Babies are fun! Until they're vomiting on you, but even then it's fine because they're cute!

January & Nick are a thing, apparently

January Jones has a new and frankly very surprising beau.

The "Mad Men" alum is reportedly dating Nick Viall — a man that our close friend calls "a feat of artificial intelligence, successfully engineered to be boring and appreciate mirrors."

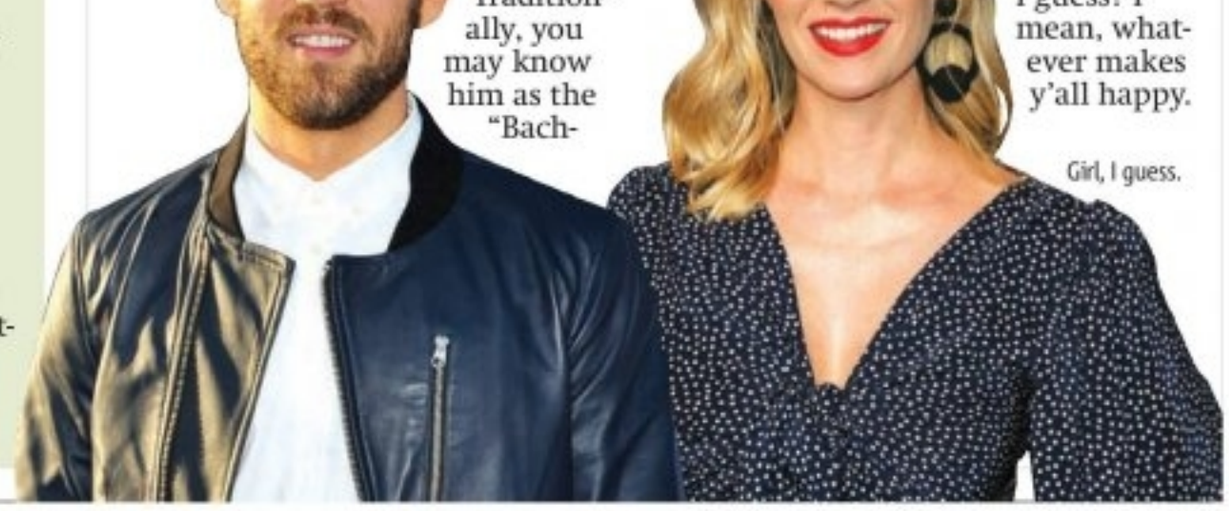
Traditionally, you may know him as the "Bachelor" that had the nerve to reject Rachel Lindsay on the 21st season of the series.

The couple got together after she admitted on "The Late Late Show with James Corden" that she's a huge fan of "The Bachelor."

"You don't know if you like him or if he's a scumbag, but that's why I'm attracted to him, maybe," Jones said of Viall on the show. Way to neg him, girl!

A source tells Page Six that the pair has been dating for about two months.

Cool, I guess? I mean, whatever makes y'all happy.



Girl, I guess.

Timothee Chalamet is bae

Timothee "🍑" Chalamet took to Instagram to announce that he's donating his salary from working on Woody Allen's "A Rainy Day in New York" to Time's Up, the LGBT Center in New York and RAINN. Atta boy!

"I am learning that a good role isn't the only criteria for accepting a job — that has become much clearer to me in the past few months." He adds: "having witnessed the birth of a powerful movement intent on ending injustice, inequality and above all, silence."

But don't worry — even though Chalamet is having an a-woke-ening, local elderly man Alec Baldwin is not. "Woody Allen was investigated forensically by two states (NY and CT) and no charges were filed," the 59-year-old tweeted, after Chalamet's post.

"I worked w WA 3 times and it was one of the privileges of my career."

Well, whatever. We believe Dylan Farrow (who has accused Allen of sexually abusing her as a child). And it looks like more people in Hollywood finally do, too.

6 Reasons to go to the Philadelphia Auto Show

Are you fired up yet?

JENNIFER LOGUE
jennifer.logue@metro.us

The Philadelphia Auto Show returns to the Pennsylvania Convention Center for its 116th year Saturday, Jan. 27 to the delight of car fanatics everywhere.

"It's one of the oldest auto shows in the world and is apart of the cultural fabric of Philadelphia," says Kevin Mazzucola, executive director of the Philadelphia Auto Show. "Whether you're five or 85, there's something for you to enjoy."

From getting to ride and drive some of the newest vehicles on the market to seeing famous Hollywood rides as well as supercars, there's so much to do, it's no wonder that this show goes for nine days straight. Here are our top seven reasons on why you should go.

It's the "garage Mahal."
Whether you're in the market to buy a car soon or not, there's no experience like the Philadelphia Auto Show.

With 700 cars in 7,000 square feet, you can get up close and personal with each of these vehicles and get informed without being pressured to buy. "There's no selling of cars at the Auto Show," Mazzucola says. "And you don't have to go dealer to dealer to see all of the cars you're considering," he adds.

Test ride some of the newest cars.
Until you get behind the wheel, it's hard to be completely sure if a vehicle is right for you. At the Philadelphia Auto Show, attendees can sign up to "ride and drive" some of the newest vehicles on the market from BMW, Volkswagen, Toyota, Kia and Mazda. "The drives are outside the convention center," Mazzucola says. "They'll have someone with you when you go that can help answer questions about the vehicle and its attributes."

Go on an adventure at Camp Jeep.
Big fan of Jeeps? You can test out the brand new 2018 Jeep Wrangler along with a number of other models on an indoor, off-road obstacle course. "Camp Jeep has different articulations of going up hills and driving across rocks," Mazzucola says. "It's been a highlight of the show the past two years."

The Philadelphia Auto Show will have over 700 cars for consumers to check out, some even available for test rides.

There will be a $2.7 million car on display.
The Philadelphia Auto Show has one of the largest collections of exotic, supercars and hypercars in the country and this year, highlights include a $2.7 million Bugatti Chiron. "According to some, it's the most expensive, most luxurious car in the world," Mazzucola explains. Along with Ferrari, Aston Martin, Rolls-Royce, McLaren and more, you won't want to miss seeing these beauties in real life.

Check out famous Hollywood rides.
There are a number of iconic vehicles that will be on display from film and television, including the Scooby-Doo Mystery Machine, The A-Team Van, K.I.T.T. from "Knight Rider" as well as some of Vin Diesel's rides from the "Fast and the Furious" series. "It was a hit last year and it's something that everyone who comes to the show checks out," Mazzucola says.

Take a walk down memory lane.
The Philadelphia Auto Show is known for its classic vehicles and what's interesting is that it's not the manufacturers bringing them to the show. "It's local classic car groups and we're fortunate in our area to have some of the best car clubs in the country,"

Take better baths in 2018

Here's everything you need to guarantee more luxurious bathing this year. ISTOCK

You deserve it.

KATE MOONEY
kate.mooney@metro.us

Here's a resolution that's easy to keep, good for you and actually perfect for the winter: Take more baths.

Unlike Dry January, the Whole 30 diet, or other punishing New Year's challenges, bathing is a seasonally-appropriate habit that's both self-indulgent and virtuous.

It warms you, relaxes you, soothes your aches and pains and — oh, yeah — keeps you clean. Whilst soaking in the tub, you can zone out or practice mindfulness, read a book or stream a show, listen to music or be silent, sip a glass of wine or let the self-care be a substitute for substances.

If there were ever a time to take the pastime to the next level, it's now, when each day brings new lows in both the weather and the news cycle. Here's everything you need to pimp out your bath time.

Invest in bath bombs
This isn't a hot springs in Tuscany; it's your apartment bathtub. You're gonna need a little something to jazz up the tap. Enter bath bombs. The blend of Epsom salt, citric acid, baking soda and essential oils will transform the bath water with good-smelling suds and swirling colors, looking kinda like My Little Pony on an acid trip. It's exciting and you'll feel like a kid again, but still adult, is what we're saying. Lushusa.com, $5.95-$8.95

Pimp your entertainment
For a truly next-level bath experience, you need this water-resistant teak bathtub caddy so you can bring some entertainment into the tub without completely soaking it. Essentially an adjustable wooden tray that fits across the bathtub, it comes with a slot to hold your mug or wine glass, a book rest to prop up your reading or streaming materials, be it a magazine or an iPad, and a soap dish for easy access. Bedbathandbeyond.com, $39.99

Create some ambience

You're less likely to indulge in tub time if you hate your bathroom. Turn it into your home spa with the addition of candles, plants and a quality speaker system. When it comes to candles, take your pick; our only advice is to make sure they're well-contained in a jar or glass to protect from moisture. As for plants, the best options are tropical greens that thrive in humidity. Think ferns, philodendrons, bamboo, or air plants. For speakers, go for the JBL Flip Portable Bluetooth Speaker. It has great sound quality and is all but waterproof (just don't submerge it). Prices vary, Amazon

Pamper yourself

Make sure you're as comfy as can be with a nonslip mesh bath pillow, complete with suction cups. Rest easy. $16.98, Amazon

Who's really the Breaking down the Eagles and Vikings NFC title matchup, position by position.

EVAN MACY
@evan_macy
evan.macy@metro.us

For the second straight week, the No. 1 seeded 14-3 Eagles (including last week's win against the Falcons) will be around three-point underdogs in Las Vegas.

And once again, the team has an underdog mentality and motive to beat the incoming Vikings on Sunday evening in the NFC Championship game.

The teams are strikingly similar when comparing roster strengths and weaknesses, which makes for a very interesting match up. With Carson Wentz's brilliant season in the rearview, Nick Foles will lead the Eagles against his former Rams teammate Case Keenum. From quarterback on down, the teams are very equal in many measures. Here is a detailed breakdown of who has an edge at each position.

ADVANTAGE VIKINGS

Case Keenum has proven to be an effective NFL starter. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Quarterback

This one could really go either way. Both Foles and Keenum have extremely similar stats, from win percentage to touchdown rate to quarterback rating. Foles has a 87.4 quarterback rating and has completed around 60 percent of his passes. He has thrown for more touchdowns in his career with 61 in 49 games. Keenum has a completion percentage near 62 percent and a QB rating of 86.0. He has thrown 46 touchdown passes in 41 games. The nod goes to Keenum, slightly, due to his almost MVP quality season at the helm of Minnesota this season but Foles is not inferior by any means.

DEAD EVEN

Nelson Agholor has come back with a vengence in 2017 after a horrific campaign the year before

Wide receiver and tight end

With Wentz, the Eagles would win this category — they threw for 38 touchdowns this season in contrast for 25 for the Vikings. But on paper the rest of the numbers are incredibly close. The Eagles outgained the Vikings through the air by just 38 yards this season. The accomplishments of the Eagles' three biggest threats — Alshon Jeffery, Nelson Agholor and Zach Ertz roughly equal those of Minnesota's Adam Thielen, Stefon Diggs and Kyle Rudolph. Any one of the aformentioned pass-catchers can break a long one at any time.

Special teams

The Vikings are a slightly better return team and the Eagles are a little better in their kicking game. A costly turnover on a botched punt return last week against the Falcons yielded the only touchdown allowed in the game. Philly will need to keep its special teams clean to prevail again.

better team, Eagles or Vikings?

ADVANTAGE EAGLES

Running back

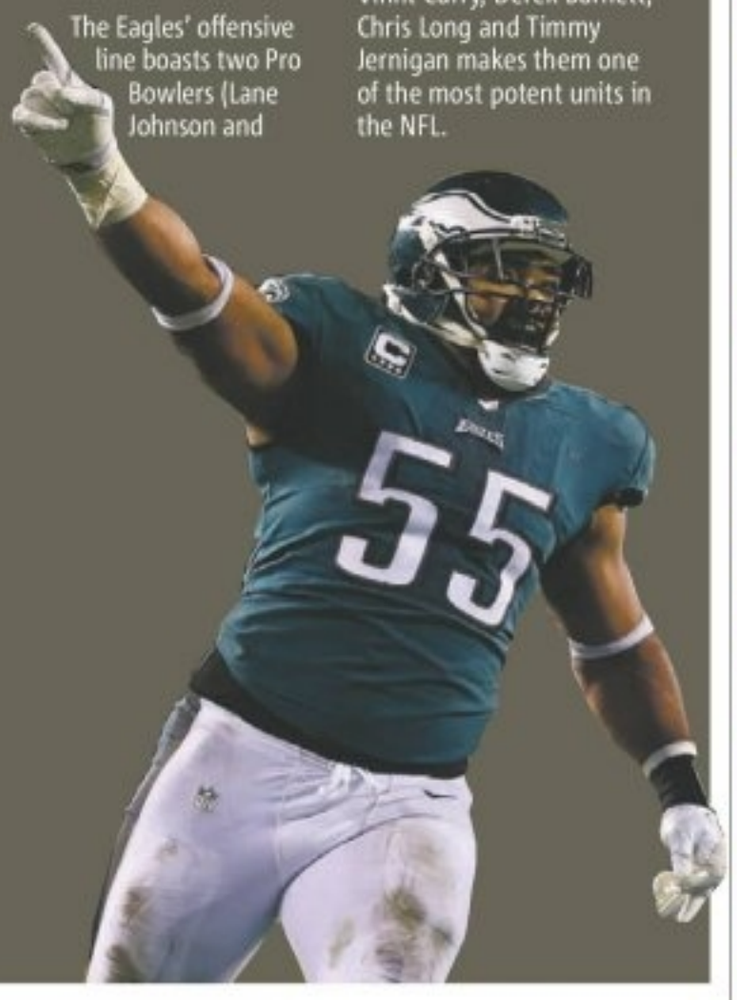
The Birds have a better run game, but by a razor thin margin having outgained Minnesota by less than 200 yards this season. Philly has the third best running game in the NFL, though Minnesota has scored 15 touchdowns on the ground to just nine by the Eagles. Philly is more efficient, as LeGarrette Blount, Jay Ajayi and company have run for 4.5 yards per carry, second best in football. The Vikings gained 3.9 yards per rush, with Jerrod McKinnon and Latavius Murry handling most of the duties.

Offensive line

The Eagles' offensive line boasts two Pro Bowlers (Lane Johnson and Brandon Brooks on the right side) and an All-Pro (center Jason Kelce). The run blocking is among the best in the NFL and the offensive line is a clear area of strength for the Eagles. However, the Vikings have allowed fewer sacks and quarterback hits — though Wentz's manuverabiluty and out of the pocket movement does explain a litte bit of that.

Defensive line

Philadelphia and Minnesota had 38 and 37 sacks on the year respectively. However, the depth and talent on the Eagles defensive line, led by Fletcher Cox and Brandon Graham and reinforced by Vinnt Curry, Derek Barnett, Chris Long and Timmy Jernigan makes them one of the most potent units in the NFL.



TOO CLOSE TO CALL

Overall roster advantage

There couldn't be two more evenly matched teams if the NFL tried. Both equads allow almost the same yards defensively per game and collect the same number of yards. Both have former back up quarterbacks leading an offense stocked with potent weapons. The Eagles front four is fierce as is the Vikings back four. Vegas may have this game as a three-point Minnesota edge, but in reality and in Philadelphia, things are absolutely positively dead even.

In a meeting last year at the Linc, the Eagles slaughtered the Sam Bradford-led Vikings, 21-10, collecting six sacks in the win while handing Minnesota its first loss of 2016 in Week 6.

For more Eagles coverage, visit metro.us

ADVANTAGE VIKINGS

Linebacker

With Jordan Hicks out, the Eagles tandem of Nigel Bradham and Mychal Kendricks has been solid. But Kendricks' brother Eric had 113 combined tackles this season as well as six deflected passes and gives Minnesota a brief edge at linebacker.

Secondary

The Vikings are very good against the pass, and very good on third down. With a secondary of household names, they are a unit good enough to really caused the Eagles wide receivers problems.

"They have some playmakers with pedigree," Eagles receiver Torrey Smith said. "They are a bunch of first rounders running around. Seeing [safety Harrison Smith] on the back end and what he can do in the box or back deep, obviously [cornerback Xavier Rhodes] is playing extremely well and the young guy [cornerback Trae Waynes] on the othereside, we've watched him grow. They are a great secondary. As always, we will have our hands full."

How will Eagles attack Vikings' NFL best-ever third-down defense?

Could Corey Clement be key for the Eagles against the Vikings third down defense?

EVAN MACY
evan.macy@metro.us

Eagles offensive coordinator Frank Reich says the Vikings defense is the best his team has faced all year. And the statistics say he's right.

"I think one of the reasons why is they can get pressure with four and cover with seven," the coach said Tuesday, shrugging off rumors he might be a top candidate to coach the Titans next season. "Any time you can get pressure with four and cover with seven, that's kind of been the key to our defensive success. That's a winning formula. That's been a proven winning formula for a long time, so I think this week is a good test of that."

According to some numbers crunching, the Vikings defense is the best of all time on third downs (or at least the best in the last two decades). They allow a conversion just over 25 percent of the time, which is a remarkably good rate (the Eagles are third best in the NFL at 32 percent).

"I think they are the best maybe ever," wide receiver Torrey Smith, who is preparing to face them Sunday afternoon said. "Statistically it's pretty crazy."

A week ago, in their 15-10 win over the Falcons, the Eagles were exceptionally successful at giving themselves third and manageable situations. Only three times out of 13 third down situations versus Atlanta did Philly need more than seven yards, averaging around five yards per attempt. As fans no doubt know Carson Wentz's accolades on third down were incredible, and his injury certainly hurts the team's third down approach. But even under Nick Foles Saturday the Birds had six third downs with less than four to go. If they can do that again, they might be able to withstand the Vikings treacherous defense.

"It's huge especially against a team like that, that can make plays on third down and get off the field," Smith said. "That's a key to our success. We have been good on third down and manageable."

So, if third and short is important, than first and second downs become important too. Suddenly, against a team like the Vikings, a three of four yard gain on the early downs becomes a necessity.

"I think like last week we need to get in rhythm," Reich said. "We need to stay in phase. We had a lot of third-and-manageables last week. I think we avoided negative plays. We had obviously a few negative runs. … We didn't have too many penalties. … Last week I think we had three drives of over 10 plays, so that's the challenge against going up against one of the better defenses in the league."

One of the biggest reasons for the third down success since Wentz' injury has been the play of Corey Clement, who has scored a surprise six touchdowns this year — two of them through the air. Saturday against Atlanta he had five catches, two of which netted first downs.

"That's been a surprise," Reich admitted, "a running back from Wisconsin who is running power. You're thinking he's going to come in here and be your third-down back. But he's worked very hard at it and really made a role for himself."

The Vikings defense is a unit that will cause the Eagles some serious headaches. GETTY IMAGES

Aries Don't accept help unless you know what's expected of you in return. Someone will have a change of heart and let you down.

Taurus Partnerships will work well for you. Collaborate to come up with a plan that can help you advance. Control emotions when dealing with personal matters.

Gemini Personal improvements will build your confidence and give you a greater sense of what you have to offer. Love and romance will change how or where you live.

Cancer Intelligence will be required when dealing with personal money or legal matters. Take a pass if someone urges you to let someone else handle your affairs.

Leo Emotions will surface if you can't come to terms with what others want. Don't be afraid to do your own thing, cut your overhead and lower stress.

Virgo An energetic schedule will be illuminating. Try new things and challenge your strength, courage and discipline. Stay focused and you will make a difference.

Libra Take on a physical challenge and re-evaluate your feelings and domestic situation. A change may be necessary, but first you must come up with a strategy.

Scorpio Don't let an emotional response you receive deter you from following your heart. You must live life your way if you want to find peace and happiness.

Sagittarius Keep your thoughts secret. Saying or revealing something prematurely will put you in an awkward position. Speak the truth or say nothing at all.

Capricorn An innovative idea can give a presentation some needed pizazz. Welcome input and be ready to collaborate with people just as eager to try something new.

Aquarius Trusting someone with your money will lead to disappointment. Do your research and be willing to walk away from a deal that poses unanswered questions.

Pisces Take care of personal money matters and documents that need to be dealt with before tax time. Being fully prepared will lead to greater opportunities. EUGENIA LAST
